Joshua Sparkes is Head gardener of Birch Farm at The Collective at Woolsery in North Devon (working previously at Sissinghurst). Josh has spent 5 years developing a method of Natural Farming based on Japanese farmers Mansobu Fukuoka and Yoshikazu Kawaguchi.

Josh's talk focuses on resilience for the future. The importance of biodiversity and providing habitat for all nature with an emphasis on agroforestry along with a greater reliance on perennials over annuals. This fascinating talk also covers minimal input systems and Natural Farming. A must watch for farmers that believe humans are nature and must be part of it, despite operating a commercial enterprise. Both inspiring and practical.

Tamsin Westhorpe - Stockton Bury Gardens

Tamsin Westhorpe is an experienced horticultural journalist and author, RHS Chelsea Flower Show Judge, podcaster and lecturer. After editing The English Garden magazine for seven years Tamsin is now a freelance writer as well as being curator and gardener at Stockton Bury Gardens in Herefordshire.

She started her horticultural career at the age of 17, spending time as a park's gardener and greenkeeper. Her career has seen her run a gardening shop, script writing for local gardening TV and lecturing the RHS Certificate. She is passionate about being hands on in the garden and splits her time between media work and looking after the 4 acres of Stockton Bury.
